

HARP STUDY AT PENN STATE

The Music Department is pleased to offer non-credit harp lessons as a service to Penn State students. The University owns a pedal harp, which will be available for practice for students who are taking harp lessons and/or performing in School of Music ensembles. Opportunities for performance exist within the college community (including School of Music chamber ensembles, symphonic wind ensemble, and orchestra) for qualified student harpists. For information, contact Ruth Hunter (harphunter@countrylink.net) who teaches beginning and advanced students. Since harp lessons are offered for as a non-credit option, the private lesson fee described for other instruments ($175/$250) does not apply. Instead, a private lesson fee is charged for harp lessons based on the length and number of lessons. For current fees, contact Ms. Hunter.
